Janusz Korczak

- Janusz Korczak was the pseudonym of the polish physician, author and educator Henryk Goldszmit (1878-1942).
- He founded an orphanage for jewish children in Warsaw. The orphanage was moved to the Warsaw ghetto during the German occupation of Poland.
- Korczak died in 1942 in the Treblinka concentration camp together with 200 of the orphans.
- The ideas of Korczak were revolutionary for education.
- His pleading for childrens' rights, for forgiveness and gentleness, for love and humor in education were formative for modern ideas of education.
- Korczak worked with the principles of democratic responsibility and participation.
- His main motto was „The child does not become a human being, it already is one“.

Basics of pedagogic work in Janusz-Korczak-Schule individual (subjective) perspective

- Any behaviour is subjectively correct.
- There are always motives of activity that are reasonable and to be taken seriously.
- Behaviour is always based on personally relevant motives.

general (objective) perspective

- Behaviour is without prospects and inappropriate concerned to an objective solution of the problem.
- The deeper motives of behaviour are unconscious.
